Easement SNAFU at treatment plant will cost $20K

By MICHAEL DANIELS

Poor coordination in planning for the upgrade of Bethel's wastewater treatment plant is apparently about to cost ratepayers an additional $20,000 to $25,000 — and, in the view of Town Manager Scott Cole, — compromise the security of the facility.

The problem also threatens the runway-expansion project at the Bethel Airport.

At issue is an easement granted to Chadbourne Tree Farms, an easement which passes in part over ground that is inside the current treatment-plant fence, and under the a corner of the plant's head-works building.

The easement was granted by the town in exchange for an easement to the town from CTF that allows the plant's outflow pipes to run under part of the CTF lot.

The easement to CTF was approved in principle at the annual Town Meeting in June 1996, well before the final plans for the new plant were drawn up.

The easement was formally re-

High-profile projects set to go before planners

Next week will be a busy one for the Bethel Planning Board.

On Monday, planners will hold a hearing regarding a cellular tower proposed for property off the Bailey Road. The meeting is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the Town Office.

Wednesday, the board will further consider the tower application, submitted by Spectrum Towers Inc. The tower would be between 150 and 190 feet tall, and located on one of two possible sites.

Also on the agenda for the Wednesday meeting is an affordable housing project proposed for Bethel Station by Community Concepts.

The Town Pond Committee will submit a site plan application for a swimming pond proposed for the Angeline site on the North Road.

Planners will also get an update from the Airport Authority on activities at the airport.

Wednesday's board meeting begins at 7 p.m. at the Town Office.

'Light Years Ago'

Among the kerosene lamps in the "Light Years Ago: The Art and Science of the Kerosene Lamp" exhibit at the Moses Mason House are (from left): a miniature blue glow lamp, a railroad lantern and a barber's or jeweler's singeing lamp. The exhibit will be open to the public until the end of this year.

Kerosene lamps came in all sizes, shapes and colors

By ALISON ALOISIO

About 35 years ago, someone gave Pat Stewart of Greenwood a kerosene lamp as a housewarming gift. At the time, she lived in Massachusetts.

"We have a lot of power outages in New England," said Stewart, "and it proved to be useful." So she bought a few more herself, to have around for emergency use. But then, she said, "It got out of hand."

Now — a hundred kerosene lamps later — Stewart has put her collection on exhibit at the Bethel Historical Society. About 70 lamps are on display at the Moses Mason House.

She acquired the lamps over the years from many sources. "My selections were based on personal taste ("This one is really cute!") and curiosity ("I wonder what this lamp was for?") rather than scholarly zeal," Stewart wrote in a handout available at the exhibit.

On display now at the Bethel Historical Society

"Many of the lamps on display were purchased at rural auctions where information about them was meager or nonexistent. Others were purchased in antique stores, gift shops or yard sales where, once again, the seller knew little about the lamp in question. Some of you visiting this exhibit may know more than I do about certain lamps."

By way of history, Stewart notes that kerosene fuel was patented in 1854 by Dr. Abraham Gesner, a Canadian geologist. "The availability of the new fuel was limited until the first dug oil well in Ontario (1858) and the first drilled well in Pennsylvania (1859) produced large quantities of oil for wide distribution. Candles and whale oil lamps quickly became passe."

Stewart's collection falls into eight general lamp categories: occupational, miniature, special purpose, banquet or parlor, all glass, composite, earlier, and contemporary.

She has several sentimental favorites, including "Little Harry's Night Lamp," (from about 1880) which, at three inches tall, is the smallest in the collection. It was

Upton each day

By ALISON ALOISIO

There was no naptime for this year's full-day kindergarteners in SAD44. Instead, they did Power Point presentations and sent out e-mail.

That might inspire longing for the olden days among senior generations. But parents of the children who just finished the district's first year of full-day kindergarten apparently have no complaints.

Jennifer Casey's daughter, Jessica, may serve as the litmus test for the new schedule. Early in the year, Jennifer, along with a few other parents and teachers, wondered if the five-year-olds might fall asleep at their desks.

The Caseys live in Upton, a 45-mile bus ride from Crescent Park Elementary School. Jennifer got on the bus at 7 a.m., arrived at CPS to put in a full day in teacher Barb Sabin's class, then rode the bus home, arriving around 4 p.m.

"Initially, I was concerned," said Jennifer. "But she took to it very well."

Bill and Ki Clough leave rich legacy

By REBECCA ZICARELLI

At the end of the month, Bill and Ki Clough will no longer call Bethel home. They will return to New Hampshire, to Bill's ancestral land, after 18 years of guiding Gould Academy.

The Cloughs came to Bethel in 1983, when Bill took over as headmaster. They found Gould Academy and Bethel attractive for a number of reasons.

"The architecture of the campus is outstanding," Clough said. "In education, it's important that children are around good things. The land and the landscape are appealing, and offered opportunity for experiential programs."

The Cloughs also liked the other cultural institutions in the area. "With the presence of Outward Bound and NTL, we saw that this is a town that was used to bringing bright, motivated people into it. Many stayed here and continued to contribute."

Clough knew Al Ordway, chairman of the board of trustees, as a youth. "There was a certain kind of comfort," Clough said, "in knowing

TOWERS TRUMP MORE HOUSES

To the Editor:

These days you hear a lot of talk about the proposed tower located off the Bailey Road in Bethel. Fear of the unknown is our biggest issue at this stage of planning. It seems that some perceive it as a grotesque, even life-threatening "thing" that may emit noise, transit harmful signals, and may even topple on to a Bailey Road home during a storm.

Starting in March, Cindy and I have had more time to think about the pros and cons than the average Bethel citizens. We have had most of our concerns answered to our satisfaction by other people who lease towers and so-called experts in other towns. One member of the planning board mentioned he was having trouble rationalizing if environmental impact issues could justify voting for acceptance of the tower. I guess it is a matter of interpretation of what is acceptable for impact.

Before the tower offer we were in the process of selling several house lots off the Bailey Road. If the tower is accepted we won't, as rental income from the tower will substitute for the lot sales. I believe there would be less traffic to the tower after completion than two homeowners would create. Most homes have at least two cars and there would be oil trucks, school buses, etc. One service truck a week is predicted per tower for maintenance, etc.

In recent years, we have noticed the serene Bailey Road is not serene anymore, from lawnmowers to barking dogs and traffic it has changed. More homes would have more environmental impact than a tower would.

I would also say that two homes versus one tower economically is a no-brainer, $250,000 on the tax rolls for income to the town is equal, but the tower doesn't have to educate children as two homes might. I feel the communication service from the tower would be beneficial to the town citizens and visiting tourists with minimum impact near our homes.

THANKS FROM MRS. WIESE

To the Editor:

I want to offer bushels of thanks to the many students, parents, teachers, friends, and especially my family, for their tremendous outpouring of love and support these past few weeks. Each of them will never know how truly appreciative I am. It is important for all of us to realize that when one door closes, another opens, not an ending, rather an opportunity to begin yet another journey. Such is the cycle of existence.

The world, its many players, its varied experiences will all affect us. Yet we are all blessed with the ability within ourselves to determine just how we will let circumstances affect us; positive or negative, the choice is ours. That said, the future is indeed bright. Best wishes to all and thanks again.

In our backyard

It's a Dirty Little Secret

It's a dirty little secret; soil erosion is the number one source of water pollution in Maine. Each year rainstorms and snowmelt wash tons of dirt off the land around the state.

How could something so "natural" be so bad? Soil erosion is natural after all. However, when we change the landscape from forests to yards, streets, farm fields, shopping centers and roads, we accelerate soil erosion. In fact, across the nation, soil is eroding at about 17 times the rate at which it forms. According to Jeff Dennis, a scientist with the Maine Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), soil erosion and the resulting silt in Maine's lakes, rivers and streams pose the single greatest threat to surface water quality.

We have all seen a stream in our neighborhood turn cloudy or brown after a good rainstorm. This cloudy water makes it difficult for fish to see and feed properly. The particles act as sandpaper against a fish's gills, causing damage and making breathing difficult.

Many fish and aquatic insects lay their eggs in gravel beds. The sediments that are deposited in the stream cover up these areas, sometimes even entombing young fish and eggs. The sediment may also destroy a stream's natural "riffle and pool" pattern and can make a stream shallower.

To add to the problem, eroded soil particles are more than just "plain dirt." They carry hitchhiking pollutants like oil, fertilizers, pesticides and bacteria. These contaminants further harm water quality.

In lakes, one particular hitchhiker can be devastating; it's phosphorous. Phosphorous, like dirt, is natural, but as we change our landscape, we increase the amount of phosphorous running off the land. Phosphorous does help plants grow, but we don't want plants like algae growing in our waters. We don't want our lakes turning green — we want them blue.

So, if we want Maine's lakes to be blue, and our streams to be clear and healthy, then we all need to help. We all need to work to stop soil erosion.

The first step is to stop soil from moving in the first place. Cover bare soil with grass, shrubs and trees so the rain doesn't have a chance to move it around. Keep exposed areas on construction sites, driveways and parking areas to a minimum. When areas must be exposed, mulch the areas every night, so that the soil is never left uncovered. And be sure to finish projects and seed the areas within two weeks.

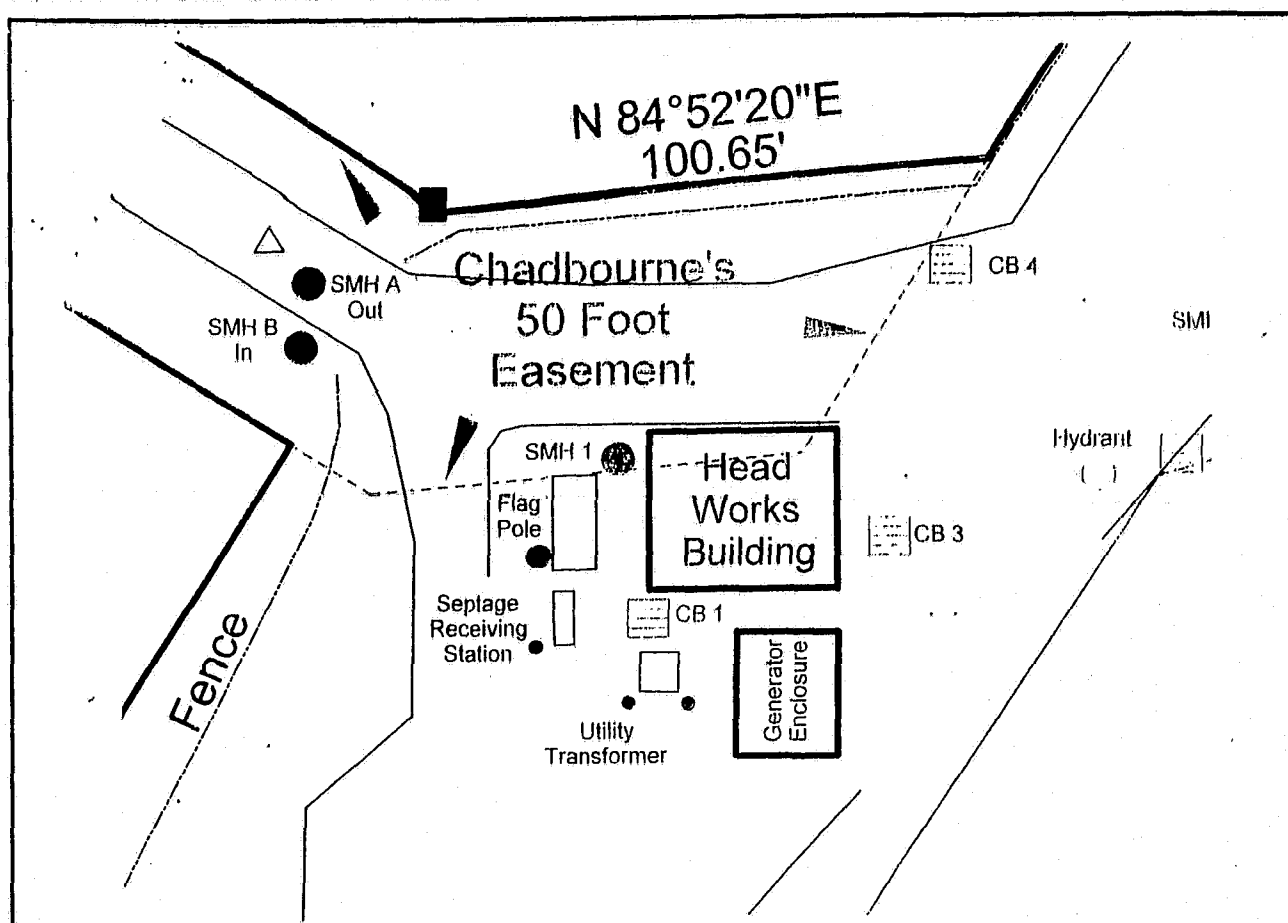

On dirt roads and driveways where the soil can't be covered, it's important to catch the soil before it reaches the stream or lake. If the volume of water isn't great, divert it off driveways, roads and gardens into a stable vegetated area so the dirt can be trapped. The best idea is to plant a ribbon of trees and shrubs, referred to as a vegetated buffer, on the down slope between places like your home and the open water to capture the soil and pollutants.

It may be a well-kept secret or a little-known fact, but the word is out — soil is water quality enemy number one. Stop soil erosion for clean Maine waters.

Easement

corded in April 1998 — more than six months after the final layout of the new facility was approved by the town Planning Board.

At the time, no one apparently noticed that the easement ran under permanent structures associated with the wastewater facility.

And now CTF owner Bob Chadbourne (who is a former chairman of the Board of Selectmen) wants at least one of those structures moved, in order to clear the easement enough to provide him with full-time access to the rear corner of his property.

He is demanding the town realign the fence and a gate by moving the fence back to the wall of the headworks building.

Cole, who was dealing with Chadbourne on the matter, balked. Turning the decision over to the Board of Selectmen this week, he said: "The matter comes to the board because I refused to move the gate on my own authority."

Cole urged them not to go ahead with moving the gate, but to seek instead to buy the easement out, even if that meant taking the matter to a politically unpopular town vote on taking the easement by eminent domain.

That course, he argued, would be less expensive in the long run and would leave a necessary barrier of space between the headworks building and whatever activities eventually take place on the CTF parcel — which is considered a likely candidate for commercial development, perhaps involving high volumes of traffic.

That introduces the prospect of a further cost to the town, Cole argued, in the form of "the increased potential of an unanticipated undesirable event."

"It just seems like good practice to keep other activities out of the control area," he told the board.

Treatment plant supervisor Rob Gundersen agreed. He noted that the headworks building is the first stop for effluent coming into the plant, and that effluent can include anything anyone pours down a drain, including gasoline.

Not interested in a deal

But Cole also told the board that Chadbourne was unlikely to allow the easement to be bought out without a fight.

"Bob's not interested in the cash," Cole said. "He wants the easement cleared."

In a June 13 letter to Cole, Chadbourne said he had been led to believe last fall that Cole was willing to move the fence and gate in the spring, but "now you tell me you can not do it because you feel it is not advantageous to the town."

Whether or not the easement was bargained for is, in your opinion, not advantageous to the town is not the point. The easement was negotiated, given and accepted. I expect the town to live up to its obligations.

Chadbourne also tied the matter to the expansion of the runway at the Bethel Airport, where he also has an easement. In the case of the airport easement, he must sign a final memorandum of agreement before the $2.4 million project can move ahead.

But, as he wrote to Cole: "As you know, I am deeply troubled by your refusal to remove the fence and gate blocking our easement at the sewer treatment plant. The easement at the sewer treatment plant was granted long before there was any discussion of easements at the airport. Therefore, I am unwilling to proceed with the memorandum of agreement until such time that the town of Bethel has lived up to its agreements at the sewer treatment plant."

Unanimous vote to move the gate

Like Chadbourne, the three selectmen present for Monday's meeting also seemed to feel the town had made an agreement and now had little choice but to honor it (selectmen Dutch Dresser and Al Barth were not present).

"There have been a lot of mistakes made here, said Don Bennett. "I just don't see the alternative."

Vice Chairman Reggie Brown concurred. "A deal is a deal. I don't really see how we can back out now."

The third member present Monday, Bob Everett, initially indicated a reluctance to vote on the matter, but Brown told him he was required to cast a vote one way or the other.

Shaking his head, Everett raised his hand to join Brown and Bennett in approving a motion to move the fence.

The motion approved Monday includes a request that CTF release the town from the part of the easement that runs under the headworks building.

Cole said Wednesday that the money to pay for moving the fence and gate will come from the sewer fund surplus account.

Lamps

probably used as a child's night light.

There's also an Aladdin's Lamp (1940), which she likes because "it's pretty and useful," she said. She used it for lighting her camp in Greenwood for several years before putting in electricity.

An English parlor lamp is another favorite. She bought it in London about 20 years ago, and almost missed her plane home when suspicious security agents thought the lamp, carried in her backpack, might be a bomb or drugs.

Some of the occupation-related lamps include a 1900 brass carriage model, which probably fit in a bracket on the front of the vehicle. "It could also be removed and hand held to light a passenger's way," said Stewart.

A brass ship's lamp has a round, blown-glass globe and a heavy base, designed for use on a rolling ship.

There is also a "Wedding Bouquet Cigar Lighter" from about 1880, "probably used in a public place like a hotel, tavern or tobacco shop." Among the earlier lamps is a clear glass whale oil lamp from around 1830.

Filling the house
Stewart describes herself as "a dabbler" in lamp collecting, compared to serious collectors like Catherine M.V. Thuro, who has written books on the subject. Stewart was able to acquire several of Thuro's lamps when her collection was put up for auction in 1987 (they are labeled as such in the exhibit).

As the years went by, Stewart filled her large Victorian home in Beverly, Mass. with lamps. But they didn't stand out as a collection at that time, because they were so scattered throughout the house.

"I didn't really work hard at it. I just bought what I liked. I kept putting them up, and cleaning them," she said.

When she moved to a smaller house in Boston, the numbers became apparent. "All of a sudden people said, 'You collect lamps!'" When the Stewarts moved to Greenwood a couple of years ago, she stored many lamps in her basement, while displaying some favorites. With space an issue, she may sell some of her collection after the exhibit closes at the end of this year.

Stewart said her knowledge about lamps has expanded further over the course of gathering information for putting together the exhibit.

She is also interested in collecting other people's memories about kerosene lamps. She writes in the exhibit description, "I would also welcome reminiscences about your own experience with kerosene lamps. Mine include helping my grandmother wash chimneys every morning when I stayed with my grandparents in their tiny cottage on the New Jersey shore more than half a century ago."

Pencil and paper are available for anyone interested in sharing a memory.

Randy Bennett, curator of collections for the Bethel Historical Society, said the lamp exhibit is "probably the most extensive private collection of historical artifacts ever exhibited at the Historical Society."

The lamp exhibit represents an expansion of the period room exhibits at the Moses Mason House, he said. The rooms reflect typical living circumstances between the years 1813 to 1869.

Several lighting implements can be seen in the period rooms, and visitors can then move on to the lamp exhibit to see more examples, Bennett said. Quilt, furniture, and clock exhibits may follow in the future, he said.

Polling hours for Tues. school vote

BETHEL—The district wide referendum on the SAD44 school budget will take place Tuesday. Polling hours for the towns are as follows: Andover, Town Hall, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Bethel, CPS, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Greenwood, municipal building, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Newry, municipal building, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Woodstock, Town Office, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Better pay, contract keep Cole on BETHEL—Town Manager Scott Cole won't be leaving Bethel for Farmington after all. In a special meeting Tuesday, three of Bethel's five selectmen signed a new four-year contract with the town manager. He had submitted his resignation last month, effective June 29, in order to accept the same job in Farmington. Cole had not yet signed a contract. The Bethel selectmen said they were deluged with phone calls in the week before and after the June 13 Town Meeting. They asked Cole what it would take to keep him in Bethel, and the new negotiation resulted in an overall $248,000 contract for four years. Cole's salary for FY'02 will be frozen at $50,000, $3,000 less than the salary he negotiated just prior to his resignation. The salary will increase to $60,000 in 2003, $66,000 in 2004 and $72,000 in 2005. Board chairman Dutch Dresser and selectman Alvin Barth Jr. were away on vacation this week.

River rage this weekend

NEWRY—Mountain bikers from across New England will compete for points and $1,000 in prizes at the annual River Rage Mountain Bike Race and Festival June 23 and 24 at Sunday River Ski Resort. Events will include dual slalom, cross-country and downhill. Each event will also include mountain-board and mountain-scooter exhibition events.

Still room in swimming classes

BETHEL—There are still slots available for summer swimming lessons with the Bethel Recreation Department. The schedule begins June 26, with times as follows: infant/toddler/preschool, 12 to 12:30 p.m.; Level I, 11:30 a.m. to noon; Level II 10:45 to 11:30 a.m.; Level III, 10 to 10:45 a.m.; Level IV, 8:30 to 9:15 a.m.; Level V and above, 7:45 to 8:30 a.m. For more information call Ellie Kingsbury (824-3152 ext. 301, leave a message).

Former teacher sentenced

PARIS—Mike Newsom, a former alternative education teacher for SAD17, was scheduled to serve a three-day jail sentence this week after he pled guilty to reckless conduct charges stemming from an incident with three students last November. Newsom, 32, resigned immediately after his arrest. Newsom forced three teens off his car at the Oxford Hills Bowling Lanes by driving the vehicle around in circles. One boy suffered minor injuries to an ankle when he jumped off the car. About 25 people spoke in support of Newsom, who previously had a clean record and was regarded as an excellent teacher. He apologized in court to the boy who suffered the ankle injury. Newsom was sentenced to five months in jail, with all but three days suspended. He will also perform community service.

Ethan Allen plant closing

ISLAND POND, Vt.—About 120 employees of an Ethan Allen furniture-making plant will be out of work soon. The plant is scheduled to close by Aug. 7. Two other plants, one in Frewsburg, N.Y., and Asheville, N.C. will also be closed. A company spokesman said there was a need to be more competitive and focus manufacturing in more suitable plants. Production at the closing plants would be absorbed by other Ethan Allen facilities.

Canoe trek coming soon

BETHEL—The Androscoggin River Source to the Sea Canoe Trek will start July 5. Organized as a series of day trips along the 170-mile long river, the trek is free for participants. Paddlers bring their own boat and equipment. An experienced leader and a ride back to the day's starting point are provided. The entire headwaters to tidewaters trek is 21 days long, though most trekkers participate for a single day. The trip begins in Lake Umbagog National Wildlife Refuge. It will come through Gilead and Bethel July 11, and Bethel and Hanover July 12. A brochure and schedule describing the trek is available by calling 842-4627, or at www.androscogginriver.org. Sponsored by a consortium of business and environmental groups, the trek is set up as a way for each river community to celebrate the progress made in recent years in cleaning up the river, and to call attention to the river's value as an economic and recreational resource.

Donate used books

WEST PARIS—The West Paris Public Library is now accepting books for the annual August Book & Bake sale, sponsored by the Friends of the Library. Books can be dropped off at the library during library hours (Monday and Friday 1:30 p.m. to 6 p.m., and Wednesday 1:30 p.m. to 7 p.m.) Anyone with a large quantity of books is asked to call ahead at 674-2004.

Millennium plaque dedication

BETHEL—A brief and informal dedication of a plaque commemorating the Millennium Sculpture "Life in Balance" will take place June 26 at 10 a.m. at the Bethel Post Office site. The public is invited. The sculpture was formally unveiled July 15, 2000.

Emergency radio equipment OK'd

PARIS—Oxford County Commissioners Tuesday tentatively approved a bid of $187,500 to replace county radio equipment used to communicate with police and fire personnel. Bid specifications will be reviewed by Dan Schorr, the county's Emergency Management Agency director, and a radio technician to make sure they meet the commissioners' requirements. The winning bid was submitted by Wireless Consulting Inc. of Cumberland Center. WCI's was only bid offered. One of the requirements was that the new system be operating by Oct. 15. If final approval is given, work would begin this summer, and there would be no gap in service during the installation, Schorr said. The new equipment will be installed and ready before the old system is turned off. Equipment on Spruce Mountain in Woodstock will be replaced as part of the work.

"Eloquent Caper" author writes again

BETHEL—Local author Randall Probert has published his fourth book in the past three years, titled "Katrina's Valley." Probert, a retired game warden, has also written "An Eloquent Caper," "A Forgotten Legacy," and "Courier de Bois." He describes the latest book as "the mystical adventure of a young man who is searching for his identity." The book is available at Books 'N Things in Bethel and G & T Country Store in West Bethel. He is also planning or working on two other books.

the board chair. He is a director of a camp (Camp Winona), and deals daily with the kids and counselors. It eases communication.

"Gould was a North Country school, which is where I always wanted to be. I don't have suburban appetites or interests. There is a certain freedom here that you can't get there."

Despite the appeals, there were also challenges awaiting the Cloughs. "I had a distinct sense that the place was less than it could be. There were great people doing great jobs, but they weren't aligned, they weren't cohesive."

"There was a lot of darkness, then. If I could dispel that dark, then I knew this place could be tremendous," Clough said.

Much of that darkness was caused by the consolidation of SAD44, two decades before. Parents of local high-school age students most likely graduated from Gould Academy, which served as the town's high school until the mid '60's. There was a rift in the allegiances of the community, a sense, Clough said, that the community was no longer certain how to embrace Gould.

Clough understood that the rift needed to heal. "Our campus is entirely open," he said. "Anyone can walk up and down the street here, and be in the middle of it."

He responded by reaching out to the town. He encouraged staff members to become active in town affairs. He encouraged programs and activities that brought students out into the community and brought members of the community onto the campus. The Mahosuc Arts Council, Clough said, is probably the most obvious of those endeavors.

Another is Yulefest, the annual winter concert. Each year, members of the community and students of the school gather in Bingham Auditorium to celebrate the season. Since the Cloughs arrived, Yulefest is also one of the most public of Ki's contributions to the school.

Ki worked behind the scenes, without drawing attention to herself. But each Yulefest, she narrated the story of Santa Lucia as children recreated the moving ceremony, an annual tradition from her native Sweden.

The children enter the darkened auditorium, garbed in white, singing "Santa Lucia, Santa Lucia." The oldest girl, with a crown of candles leads them down to the stage, a living incarnation of the Italian saint that brought food to starving Swedes centuries ago.

As part of the Clough team, Ki also ran the annual parent auction, which supports the ski program. She graciously welcomed parents and students, worked with trustees and staff.

"Ki's moral tone and example are tremendous," Clough said. "She's really 50 percent of the operation."

Clough recalls an incident, from the past year. The kitchen staff came in to make breakfast, and found the chandeliers in the dining hall festooned with undergarments. "Ki was the first up the ladder, to remove everything before the students arrived," Clough said. She took the prank, which could have been just another imposition on the maintenance staff, and turned it into a shared burden.

Clough is reluctant to take credit for the school's success, believing, he said, that it is a team effort. "There is a good, solid knot of committed staff members. They are not shoppers. They've chosen this area as much as the school. They have proven to be people that I can work with, not people that leave when you hit the rough spots."

New headmasters need to tackle manageable projects that allow them to leave their mark, that show that they're capable. When the Cloughs first arrived, they tackled the old dining hall, in Gehring. They had the facility refurbished, and spiffed up their first summer here.

Since then, they've overseen other building projects, with something going on nearly every year. They built the new dining hall, Ordway Hall, which allows all the students and teachers to gather at the same time for a meal and rebuilt Gehring. They built the barn, so that students could learn biology the old-fashioned way. They built a log-cabin sauna, miles of cross-country ski trails, two new baseball fields (and rebuilt two old fields), and the Competition Center at Sunday River. They replaced the roof on the field house and rebuilt Vogt House and Brown House, the new admissions office and development office.

There were little projects, as well, such as the bell tower, an alumni project; and the kiln, built by students last year.

Along the way, the Cloughs built up the school's endowment. Now, the school is building a new science building, but Clough will hand that project over to his successor.

The new headmaster will step in to a school with strong enrollment, a strong staff, an energizing and well-funded building project, and a strong board.

According to Vince Durnan, executive director of the Independent School Association of Northern New England, the little-known school in Bethel, Maine, has been placed on the map during Clough's time here.

"Through his work with the New England Association of Schools and Colleges, Bill spread Gould's name around the world," Durnan said. "He loves to put on the country boy face, but he's very shrewd and very articulate. He's taken Gould much closer to the spotlight."

One of the most significant contributions of Bill and Ki Clough is the way students and staff have lived up to their example, as noted two years ago in the final report of the school's accreditation process. Gould Academy is an extremely tolerant and supportive place. The teasing, harassing, and hazing commonly expected in a high-school environment are unusual here. It is a safe place to go to school.

Al Ordway, chairman of the board, said "Clough is carved out of New Hampshire granite. His wonderful mix of educational knowledge and ability combined with the attitudes of a northern New Englander made him perfect for Gould. He looked at his time here as an opportunity to serve rather than an opportunity to hold. He has shown strength, loyalty and humility — attributes that made him a great leader and good role model."

But his grandfather's sugar bush is waiting in New Hampshire. There will be time to build a home there now. There are things to look forward to: time to spend with grandchildren, time to spend in Ki's homeland of Sweden, time to pursue dozens of interests that were put on hold while life revolved around Gould Academy.

Kindergarten

So well, in fact, that after two days of summer vacation, Jessica is bored and ready to go back, according to her mom.

"She was getting so much at school," said Jennifer. "She couldn't get enough, and never felt overwhelmed."

And the bus ride? "It gave her a chance to wind down after school, and wind up to school in the morning," said Paul Casey, Jessica's dad.

Darcie Miles' son, Sam, spent the year with teacher Robin Smith at CPS. The Miles live in Bethel.

"I was extremely happy," said Darcie. "He had no problem adjusting to the schedule. And he's doing things my older son was doing in first grade."

Miles favored the switch from the beginning, she said, because it would provide more learning time, she said.

The longer day, said Sabin, exceeded the teachers' expectations. "Our big fear was they would be exhausted," she said. But problems never materialized, she said.

Smith thinks it was a smart move to jump right in with the full day right from the first day of school. Some schools, she said, try a half day with a group of children, then work up to a full one. But going right to the full day, she said, "They don't know anything different."

Mary Merrill, the third kindergarten teacher at CPS, agrees. By the middle of the day, she said, "they've got their second wind."

Expanding the learning

The children came to school ready to take advantage of the luxury of learning with plenty of time available, the teachers said.

Instead of the greater percentage of the day being taken up by arriving and getting ready to leave, they could expand into the skills and knowledge they could only touch on before.

"There's more time to teach kids reading in different ways," said Sabin. And when the class studies a particular theme, like dinosaurs or space, the kids can explore the subjects more.

"Before it was just a quick exposure," said Sabin. This year, with the help of older children, the kindergartners did research on the Internet and Power Point presentations.

Jennifer Casey said Jessica came home from school reciting all the planets in the solar system. "The kids are eager for the stimulus," she said.

The teachers did make some adjustments to allow for a little fatigue among their five-year-olds.

"We do the heavy duty academics in the morning, and the more hands-on things in the afternoon," said Smith.

Same sentiment in Andover

Alice Lee, the kindergarten teacher at the Andover Elementary School, has taught for two years — one year with half-day, one with full-day kindergarten. There's no doubt about her preference for the full-day.

"The time is everything," she said. "We had the time to do it — and it shows. It's a great age. They're just so excited about learning. We've got to take advantage of it."

Sabin said despite the individual differences in learning among the students, most needs could be served by the small class sizes (13 each this year) and tutors in the classroom. By the end of the year, some students were writing sentences, while others were still focusing on individual words. All made progress, however, she said.

Next year, it will be the First-Grade teachers who will be doing the adjusting. "All the things that take the first quarter (of first grade) to learn, they've already done," said Smith.

river and was a lay-about. I just concentrated on breathing.

The other morning while taking Tasha for a walk, I saw an odd looking chicken hanging out by the chicken coop down the road. As I got closer, I realized that it wasn't a chicken at all, but the turkey. So I guess he she is back.

While returning from the river after searching high and low for Tasha's leash, I saw that the usual group of drunken people at Frenchmen's had left only one fellow there, and a fire. I tried to talk to him to ask if he had a permit — this was before Sunday's rain — knowing he had not. He was out cold. I could not rouse him even when I shook his foot. Now I know people drink at the river and I am not going to tell anyone they shouldn't. That is their fun time and that is ok. What is not ok is camping illegally and lighting fires and not watching them. If that fire had caught the grass or trees, the whole valley could go up in smoke. People could lose their homes/camps. Wildlife would be endangered. So please if you must light a fire, make sure someone is keeping a close watch on it. I do not want to see a forest fire here. Had that caught, it could well mean the end to our use of Frenchmen's. People are only there because the owner allows it. He could change his mind and chain the place off.

Annie came by with tomato plants. Guess I'll have tomatoes to give away next month or August. Jan brought me lettuce, too. Perhaps by the time you read this, I will have the garden all in. That is the plan.

Don't forget that the 28th is the night for the Bethel Area Poets Society reading. It will probably be at the Café. Stay tuned next week to find out for sure.

Saw a bull moose Sunday on Route 5/35 on the way home from Lovell. It wasn't huge but did have a nice rack. Probably trying to get away from the mosquitoes. They seem to be fierce this year.

Sunday evening was also the night for the second healthy eating meal hosted by Marsea. It was held at Polly and Bob Davis', with Marsea providing the cooking and instruction. Food was great and all had an enjoyable evening.

Have a good week. Hopefully it will not be as hot and humid. Enjoy summer, as Solstice is Thursday the 21st.

Hanover

by Clem Worcester

There was another moose killed on Main Street last week. In front of Gross' driveway, a truck hit a moose and drove it into the side of the road about 30 feet beyond their mailbox. There were no skid marks and the truck apparently never stopped. The State Highway Department picked it up shortly after.

Bear sightings continue throughout the area. Dan Baker saw one cross Main Street near the Sunflower Farm and another bear was spotted crossing the Howard Pond Road just up the hill from the Robin residence. Stanley Brown and Betty Hayden have both reported seeing a mother bear with two cubs near their homes. When the bears realize they have been spotted, they climb trees.

Gardner Roberts Memorial Library held its annual meeting Tuesday, June 12, at the library. Because of declining usage, the members present voted not to have regular hours this year. Anyone wishing to visit the library, take out or return books, are asked to contact Joan Everett or Trudy Ames and make an appointment. The Gardner Roberts Memorial Library is located on the Howard Pond Road and has served the community for 100 years. Anyone with ideas for future use for this Hanover centerpiece are also urged to contact Joan and Trudy.

Hanover selectmen are scheduled to have their monthly meeting on June 26, at 6 p.m., at the Town House.

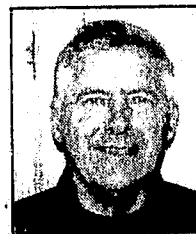

Stephen Richardson from Portland has been staying at his South Shore Road Cottage.

Ken and Jen-Goddard have been seen around town, as they have returned from Florida.

Clem Worcester reports that once again his make-believe truck has left town on the hook. This time it is getting a new clutch and motor. Brian Worcester, David Worcester and Clem were in Skowhegan Tuesday looking for parts. On Thursday, they traveled to Portland.

On Sunday, June 10, Clem Worcester was in Bowdoinham for a meeting of the Grand Lodge Knights of Pythias where he served in his capacity as Grand Prelate. Also there was Danny Bennett, the Grand Inner Guard, from Milton.

Mason Township

by Richard Grover

I recently received news that one of my old Air Force buddies, with whom I was stationed for about six years, is enduring the terminal stages of cancer. Kent Harrah is one of those characters who leaves you with indelible impressions on your memory banks. As an example, as a "rich bachelor" making a full $222 a month base pay plus $100 flight pay in 1960, Kent bought himself a bright red Corvette, which exceeded 140 mph on the road between Minot and the Minot Air Base, about 13 miles north, on more than one occasion. This car had a space for a spare windshield washer fluid bottle under the hood; this was routinely filled with the finest scotch. At parties he was often seen drinking beer from a glass urine specimen bottle from the VA hospital where his nurse girlfriend worked at the time.

The Corvette proved too tame, so Kent traded it in for a Jaguar XKE, which he claimed would go faster than the Corvette. I never rode in it. Before too long, he decided to marry his nurse girlfriend, Ginger. In keeping with his new image as a family man, Kent traded the Jaguar in for a family car, a white Buick Wildcat convertible. The two of them got along famously ever since, despite Ginger's battle with multiple sclerosis for the past 22 years. Kent was diagnosed with prostate cancer a few years ago, learning too late that it had already spread outside the gland. Now, he has tumors and/or lesions in nearly every part of his body, including the brain, and he is taking a time-release type of morphine. Last week, Kent sent an e-mail that they had sold their beautiful home and their motor home and will soon move in with their daughter for his final days. Ginger will stay on in a special handicap accessible addition to her home.

Despite all this trauma, Kent retains his sense of humor and an outwardly calm demeanor. He is fond of saying that both his dad and grandfather died of heart attacks, and he always figured that was how he was going to "check out." He seems to have accepted his fate, made his peace, and is prepared (but not eager) to go. I will miss him.

One day last week, I took a container of Mona's home-baked Jacob's cattle beans to work for lunch. At lunchtime, I put the plastic container of beans and hotdogs in the microwave for 4 1/2 minutes and went back to my machine until a convenient break time, about 10 minutes later. When I removed the cover, I noted that I had perhaps left them too long in the microwave. Many of the beans on top had split open. As I looked closer, I observed that the jagged edges of the split-open bean skins were waving in the air, some in one direction, and others in another. When I showed this phenomenon to Eeyore, he observed, "You've heard of Montezuma's revenge? Well, you better look out. This could be Mona's revenge."

Gilead

by Elise Caswell

My husband, Stephen, and our two boys moved up to the Bog Road in October.

I've been reading "The Bethel Citizen" every Thursday since then and have noticed there is no one sending up a voice from Gilead. Being a writer and new to the area, I decided to pick up the gauntlet and offer my newcomer's perceptions in an attempt to get to know my new home better and so that others may perhaps get to know me.

It was quite a winter. I've been reassured that it was unusual in its depth of snow. We actually moved up north because we all love the winter so much. It seemed like a great gift through January, February and March. Working at Sunday River, the time flew by and we had lots of opportunity to indulge our snow-driven passions, but by April Fools', the bill came due ... our lack of experience in hearty Maine winters proved to make a mockery of us because on April Fools' Day, our garage caved in under the weight of the snowfall.

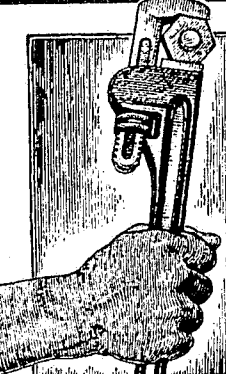

I've noticed a certain grace has accompanied us on our move north ... you know, the little coincidences that work to give a person the feeling they're on the right track? About a week after the cave-in, a man came to our door. It was Tony Bennett ... a neighbor, coming to offer to take our old garage away in exchange for the materials that could be salvaged. It helped him out and it helped us, too. Now the garage is coming right along with the help of our sons' friends and the timely assistance of neighbors who stop by to chat. Every time my husband had a wall built and ready to raise, someone from the road would come along to help hoist it up in place. We have the Parkers, Duplessises, Minors, Davises, Alan Newton, Bob Noyes and others to thank for our vertical walls. When the mountain closed up, our social connections came to a pretty abrupt end, so the garage has brought people around and made us feel like part of the community.

This morning as I drove my late-riser son to Telstar High School, we passed a dead moose beside the road at Pleasant Valley Campground. The image of its massive body lying still startled me.

On the way home, I stopped to pay my respects just as Michele Mador was coming toward him to take his picture. She told me she had been awakened by a crash at 4 a.m. A man from Gilead had been driving east on Route 2 in the fog when he came head on into the moose that looked to be over 700 pounds or so. Luckily, his truck was pretty new and equipped with dual airbags, which saved his life. The moose lost an antler in the crash and went down. She called 911 and help came in minutes ... the moose was bellowing his pain and five shots from the policeman's handgun didn't help. He finally needed to resort to a rifle to help that poor old moose out of his pain ... another loss of wildlife to mankind and his fast-paced lifestyle.

The positive thing that came out of the moose's death was that Stephen and I got to meet another neighbor. We shared our sadness for the moose and sympathy with the driver who hit him. We met little Shaun who chewed on a green marker while we adults talked. In the moments between regarding the huge animal's death, the blood on his velvet antler, the life fluid draining from his nose in contrast to the wide, bright eyes of a nine-month-old lively child, I wish to

by Sharon Bouchard

Sharon Bouchard's column is published here by special arrangement with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

Hallelujah and thank God for summer vacations. Yes, I am on vacation this week and exactly what I am going to do to enjoy this well deserved vacation is really anyone's guess. If I had my way I would do absolutely nothing, but so far I have scrubbed floors, done laundry, cleaned the kitchen, weeded the garden and it is only Tuesday morning.

I have spent many past vacations when my kids were little trying to pack as much activity into the shortest period of time with the least amount of money. That usually meant a lot of picnic lunches to take on trips to the ocean in a hot car with a couple of overly excited kids.

Don't get me wrong; I have very fond memories of vacation trips to the ocean. On the way we would all sing and act silly and enjoy the scenery along the way. I so much enjoyed these times that I was undaunted by my kids asking repeatedly "Are we almost there yet?"

Periodic bathroom stops didn't faze me a bit even though I took those opportunities to remind everyone that I went before we set out. And I felt more pride than annoyance when one of my kids just learning to count to high numbers would count to 1000 over and over - very slowly.

When we got to the beach everyone had a wonderful time playing tag with the surf, flying kites, collecting seashells and exploring tidal pools for marine life.

Oh, things would get a little tense when it would be discovered that I had everything to grill hamburgers or hot dogs except the charcoal for the hibachi; or that I would realize that the beach towels were still on the kitchen counter when the kids were chest deep in the sea. We'd work it all out.

All in all, those were great vacation times even if the trips back home seemed to take forever and the kids' youthful exuberance was replaced with exhaustion induced crankiness and their sibling love was replaced by a deep dislike for each other.

It was the arrival back home that marked the end of my good time. This was when everything that went on the trip must now be put away. I don't know about other people, but the last thing I feel like doing after a long day at the beach is separating seashells from soggy hamburger buns. And the sand; how we always ended up with all that sand in every crevice and crack, I'll never know.

Everyone has his or her own idea of what a great vacation is. For some it is the opportunity to get out in the great outdoors and mingle with nature. That really isn't for me; if I want to commune with Mother Nature I'll watch a National Geographic special on T.V. or find a rerun of Marlin Perkins harassing the Galapagos Island seals on Wild Kingdom.

A perfect vacation for some is to pitch a tent next to a babbling brook and cook their meals over an open campfire. I figure that if the good earth was meant to be slept on God would not have invented beds. I can see where cooking over an open fire would have some appeal, but a lit candle next to the microwave will produce a similar ambience without the smoke and mosquitoes.

I like watching the creatures of the woods as much as the next person, but I have no tolerance for mosquitoes the size of hummingbirds or black flies with homicide in their little bitty hearts. And there are snakes out there in the wild; need I say more?

A vacation in a resort would certainly be nice if one can afford it. I can't imagine what it would be like staying in a hotel and having someone else clean up after me. Eating out every day and never having to cook or wash a dish would be heaven. To come and go as you please and have something new and exciting to do every day - does such a life really exist?

A vacation like that would have a pretty serious price tag and until I win the lottery it's out of the question. I have no desire to eat macaroni and cheese for a full year or two to spend five days in complete luxury with no responsibilities and have the time of my life. Well, now that I think about it, maybe I could get used to a steady diet of macaroni and cheese.

I'll keep that in mind for future years, but for this year, I think I'll just kick back and maybe read a good book and watch a few good videos. I plan to stock up on junk food so that I don't have to cook. In fact, I don't even plan to get dressed or wash or even comb my hair until I have to go back to work. I'm not going to answer the telephone or the door and some days I may not even get out of bed.

The way I see it a few days of being incommunicado will be tremendously relaxing. And I think my husband will be supportive of my "don't do a thing" plan. That is if he doesn't get too hungry for a real meal and if he can keep down wind of me.

Andover

by Joan Stinson Carney

I want to thank the person who wrote the news about the Alumni Banquet that appeared in my column last week. If there were any mistakes, they aren't mine. Talk about ghostwriters, guess I need one.

Don't hold your breath or anything like that, but rumor has it that Highway 5 from the Transfer Station to the center of town is going to be paved sometime this week. It's only been about 30 years since it has been tarred; how wonderful the state of Maine is to us. So be prepared for a little inconvenience, but just think how nice it will be after. The Upton dirt road will be fixed sometime in early July. "Flatlanders" will think that they aren't in Maine anymore.

Voting on the SAD44 School Budget for next year will take place on Tuesday, June 26. Polls will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. (at the Town Hall of course). Did you ever wonder what happens if we don't pass the budget? No school next year? Underpaid teachers get less pay? They do away with unnecessary things like music, art, and sports? It is your responsibility to get out and vote, no matter what your vote is, so do it. That's an order.

The Andover Town Office will be closed on Thursday, June 28. So if you have anything that needs to be registered, or paid, please don't try to do it on Thursday.

It's getting to be that time of year again. Olde Home Days are creeping up on us. The theme this year is "Andover, Gateway to the Lakes and Trails." August 3, 4, and 5 are the dates. The buttons arrived last week and are really pretty. Nancy Wardwell did a very good design

North Newry

by
Gil Seeley

You can call it anything you want ... but I will call it "a joyous get-together" at Claire and George Romano's in Wiscasset on Sunday, June 10, celebrating Father's Day, birthdays, weddings, anniversaries, etc. Present were Julia Goodwin, a great-grandmother from Waterville; Paul and Michelle Josephson and children Nicky and Kylie from Cumberland; Aaron and Colleen Bachelder and children Jenny, Holly and Buddy from Morganton, N.C.; Heidi and husband Arlan Littlefield and son Jodi from Bethel; Julie Dyer and children Natalie and Alexis from Bethel; Wilma Stewart from Unity; Linder Parker from Troy; Leon Grover from Windsor; Debbie Madsen and Melinda from West Gardiner and Reginald and Karlene Bachelder from North Newry. Did I miss anyone? And of course, I was there to enjoy the fun and good food.

The Newry Mothers Club was at the Town & Country Inn Monday night, June 11, for their annual banquet. Present were Patty Lowell, Sylvia Harrington, Sis Post, Sylvia Wight, Bertha Broomhall, Doris Parent, Gil Seeley, Heidi Littlefield, Karlene Bachelder, Nancy Wight, Cheryl Eliot, Brenda Wight, Christine Blake, Retta Berry and Kathy Cummings.

Upton

by
Eleanor LeComte

The jungles of New Guinea were no more hot and humid than Upton has been the past week. The comfort level dipped even further when the flying insect level reached a peak. Upton usually has lovely breezy weather. The only time we allow rain is at night, but we made an exception on Sunday because it did change the weather pattern. Errol had a horrendous thunderstorm and rain Saturday night. It missed Upton.

The warm weather did wonderful things for the tomato plants and the lupine. We have beautiful spreads of lupine all over town. We really don't know exactly who brought the lupine to Upton. Three ladies receive the credit. They are Mrs. Angevine, Mrs. Jacobs and Mrs. Durkee. No doubt there was a swapping of plants in those days as there is today. Other ladies spreading lupine in the '60s and '70s were Elsie Fuller, Mary LeComte, Arline Bernier, Marilyn Brennon, Ginny Williamson and Connie Gagnon. There is lupine on every road in town and on Hiawatha Homestead hill. The pinks, purple, rose and white spikes do not last long but are well appreciated while they are blooming.

Craft night was well attended last week and was enjoyed by everyone. Simone Lavalée instructed on needlepoint. Ginny Williamson did a "show and tell" with crafts from Florida. Debbie Judkins exhibited a baby quilt that she is in the process of completing. Lucille always has a quilt in progress.

The culvert on Cross Street is being repaired. The road is temporarily closed.

Something mysterious is happening to the flowers in the window boxes at the town office. Every night some creature pulls them up and drops them on the ground. It may be a red squirrel or a chipmunk. We originally thought the rain off the roof was washing them out, so Earl Largesse installed some gutters that he had on hand. The critter struck again, tossing plants to the ground. We will give it one more try and if the phantom flower-puller strikes again, he is welcome to the boxes.

Clyde Stratton at Birch Point dealt with the heat in his own way. He donned his bathing trunks and painted his dock while up to his neck in Lake Umbagog. The lake was well used for swimming over the weekend.

There is a mother mallard duck with 17 ducklings swimming around this end of the lake. The discipline is remarkable. Mother takes no nonsense from her offsprings. With 17 kids to watch she has to do what she has to do. There is another mallard up toward the public landing with only two ducklings. She has been seen swimming around with her babies on her back.

I think that is rather unusual for mallards. One loon chick has been hatched. This is very early, I believe, on Lake Umbagog. My source is very reliable.

I think that Mother Mallard deserves the dubious title "Bird of the Week," or "Mother of the Year."

The Woodstock High School Alumni Banquet was well attended with 123 people attending; three from the Class of 1931, five from the Class of 1941 and six from the Class of 1951. We also had from the Class of 1925 and two of the former teachers from W.H.S., Mrs. Ann Crockett and Mrs. Douglas Thompson and wife from Belfast. The cake was very nice with a picture of the old high school on it. A delicious banquet was served by the Legion Auxiliary. Scholarships were awarded to Bridget Billings, Heather Jordan, Alex Johnson, Daniel Stevens, Nathan Hurd and Robert Bean. Eight seniors attended.

On Sunday, Beatrice Farnum, Alice and Ken Hoyt, Jim Hoyt, Beth, Steve and Marybeth Hoover and JoAnn, David and Shawn Crockett attended a graduation party potluck dinner at Robert and Althea Stevens' Camp on Song Pond for Daniel Stevens.

Sunday evening the Hoyt family held a family reunion at the Grange Hall dining room. A potluck supper was enjoyed and everyone got a chance to visit with Maynard Hoyt, who was home for a visit from Indiana. Besides brothers, sisters and families, three aunts attended, Barbara Gerrier and Alice Gould of Mexico and Margaret Howitt of Rumford. A total of 69 or 70 was present.

Judith Grover Tent 17 Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War held a meeting Monday evening at the Grange Hall. Seven members were present. It was reported that Sharon Silver of Silver Creations donated the flowers for the honor roll and Danny from the Village Store donated the popples. Thank yous were sent to each of them. Jayme Mack was the essay winner from the fourth grade. It was voted to pay for the granddaughters' breakfast at convention. Marybeth Hoover was appointed delegate to convention. The next meeting will be a picnic at Helvi Cary's home at 6 p.m. Thirty-one calls were reported. Elsie Bonney received the mystery package. Something was read on Flag Day. The flag has been changed 27 times since the first flag. Some are going to convention June 21 and 22.

The Unitarian Universalist Church has held its last service for the summer and will open again on Sept. 9.

Teena's Country Dining Room in East Rumford will be opening on Monday, June 25 at 11 a.m. Many local Woodstock residents enjoy the good home cooking of "Teena" and her sister, Emmie.

Alice and Ken Hoyt and Mary Beth Hoover attended the concert at Edgcomb on Tuesday evening. Joseph and Maggie Hoyt were in it.

South Woodstock

I apologize for not having news last week. Doctors' appointments several times lately have kept me on the run.

My daughter, Kellie Record, treated me to an early birthday by taking me to the Christmas Tree Shop in South Portland. I had never been there and had wanted to for some time. They have the most unusual and many items to choose from. She also treated me to lunch at the mall. Sarah Hart and son, Zack, also went with us. It was a pleasant and fun day.

Ethel Davis brought up a picture of Richard Wing when he was 17 years old. Richard worked for her father, Gayden Davis, cutting meat at that time. He sure has changed. Thanks, Ethel.

Brad Record and son, Shane, are hiking part of the Appalachian Trail for two weeks this summer. It should be quite an experience.

Sympathy goes out to the family and friends of John Herrick, who died recently. John's mother, Lillian Silver Herrick, used to live near me in South Woodstock.

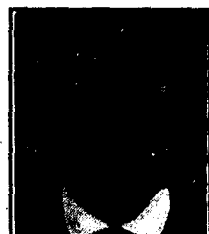

Marta Clements was tendered a surprise retirement party June 12 at the Unitarian Church in West Paris. Marta taught school for many years and now wants some time to do some of the things she hasn't had time to do. The fifth-grade class parents and friends organized the party. Marta received several nice gifts. I went to represent the Willing Workers Organization. I also wanted to wish her well in her deserved retirement.

I had a nice visit with Minna Morgan one morning this past week. She stopped by and we visited on the deck for a while.

Those on the honor roll this term from this area are: OHCHS — Jamie Monzo, Tara Monzo and Erik Poland; TMS — Kara Thurlow, William Demarest, Kevin Gallagher and Caitlin Shimamura.

On Alumni Weekend, Joe and Peg Perham had as guests, Margaret Merrill of Rehoboth, Mass., and John and Iris Perham of Newton Upper Falls, Mass.

Last Sunday's Soap Box Derby race winners were: seven to 11 age class, Samantha Hill, first; Mike Church, second; Amanda Heath, third; and 12 to 17 age class, Seth Fogg, first; Elaina Sessions, second; Ryan Reid, third. The next race is scheduled for July 1.

Allen Lamb of Santa Fe, N.M., visited his mother, Joyce, last weekend.

John Young spent last weekend with his mother, Phyllis.

Bobby Jo and Chad Chase are receiving congratulations on a 10-pound son, Keegan Everett.

Goodwill Fellowship will meet on Monday, June 25, with Beryl Bonney at Round Pond for a picnic/bag supper. Pokeno will be played after the meeting.

Seems like summer has arrived with a vengeance. Eighty-plus temperatures and humidity to take all our strength and energy all at once. Feels more like late July and August than June. Have to water the gardens every day so they'll grow properly.

Tuesday, June 12, a supper and party were held at the West Paris Universalist Unitarian Church for Mrs. Marta Clement, who is retiring this year from teaching at the Agnes L. Gray School for 18 years. She will surely be missed. Troop 1113 Girl Scouts worked this supper. Their leader is Michelle of Michelle's Hair Fashions on Route 26 in West Paris. Good job, girls. They also finished knitting scarves for teddy bears under the direction of the knitting group from Bryant Pond. These will go to New Hampshire for traumatized children. We are so proud of our Girl Scout Troop 1113. It is an active and growing group. We are glad to be their sponsors at the West Paris Baptist Church.

On Saturday night, June 16, the West Paris Baptist Church hosted Al Tachney and his "Circus of the Star," a very good Christian family variety show, followed by refreshments downstairs. A good time was had by all, parents and children alike. We were all glad to welcome Al back again this year.

There will be a memorial and burial service for my husband, Pastor Gordon T. DeHaas on Saturday, June 23 at 1 p.m. at the Pleasant Valley Cemetery in Hungry Hollow by the Little Red School House on Route 26. This will be under the direction of Bartlett Hutchinson of I.W. Andrews Company of South Woodstock. The service will be conducted by Pastor Bruce Tyner at the West Paris Baptist Church.

Troop 1113 Girl Scouts will hold a fundraiser bottle drive on Saturday, June 23, from 1 to 4 p.m. at Michelle's Hair Fashions on Route 26 in West Paris. Let's dig out the bottles, folks.

Also on Saturday, June 23, West Paris Grange 298 will hold their monthly potluck supper from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m., (adults, $5 and kids, $2.50) followed by a program put on by the Mahosuc Arts Group. Come on out folks for an evening of good food, good program and good fellowship.

This promises to be a very busy day for most of us involved in all three of the previous activities.

Church as a charter member and helped with its first new building. He was a member of the Central Florida Mineral and Gem Society. He was the first master guide in the Northern New England Conference in 1932, and later served as a camp and pathfinder counselor in both Northern New England and Florida Conference.

Survivors include two sons, David Wilson of Palmdale, Calif., and Leslie Wilson of South Woodstock; four daughters, Lorena Wilson of South Woodstock, Emily Brown of Angwin, Calif., Priscilla Staley of South Woodstock and Patricia Armstrong of DeFuniak Springs, Fla.; a sister, Eda Waterhouse of South Woodstock; two sisters-in-law, Burna Wilson and Mary Currie; one brother-in-law, Elmer Waterhouse; 15 grandchildren, and 24 great-grandchildren. He was predeceased by four brothers, Leland, Kebab, Myrle and Delwin Wilson.

Arline (Littlehale) Hutchinson, 88, of Apopka, Fla., formerly of South Woodstock, died early Friday morning, June 15, 2001 at the Florida Living Nursing Center, where she had resided for the past 10 days.

She was born in Woodstock on May 15, 1913, daughter of the late Walter E. and Faye O. (Wilson) Littlehale. She attended the South Woodstock schools, and graduated from Pine Tree Academy, Auburn.

In her later years she returned to school, attending nursing school at Thayer Hospital in Waterville, studying to become a licensed practical nurse. She was a staff member at Stephens Memorial Hospital in Norway, as well as other institutions.

She married Ernest Dudley, who died in 1970. Later, she married Dee Hutchinson, who predeceased her in 1987.

A resident of Florida since 1966, in the greater Orlando area, she specialized in private duty nursing, prior to her retirement.

She was a former member of the South Woodstock Seventh Day Adventist Church, and a member of the Forest Lake Seventh Day Adventist Church, Altamonte Springs, Fla. She was a member of Maine Audubon and a former member of the Twin-Town Nature Club and the Sunshine Club, both of South Paris.

Card of Thanks

The family of Alfred Merrill would like to extend sincere gratitude to our friends for the many kindnesses shown to us during our recent loss. The visits, phone calls, cards and food brought to each of us has meant so much.

In particular, we would like to extend a very special thank you to Muriel Butters who visited the farm nearly every morning for the past four years to get Dad's breakfast and spend an hour with him talking about the current news events. She also took the time to bake him custard or make some peanut butter fudge or popcorn balls. It was the highlight of his day. Reg and Becky Gilbert and their daughters were wonderful neighbors. They always stopped by to sit on the porch in the summer and visit or came to check on a medical problem when necessary.

We would also like to mention the nurses at Ledgeview Living Center, the nurses from Androscoggin Home Health Care and Hospice, and the nurses engaged by Elder Independence of Maine who also contributed so much to our father's comfort and care.
